

Know Your Numbers

Accounting for in-house lawyers

In-house lawyers with a good understanding of accounting and financial reports have a tremendous advantage. This practical half-day workshop is specifically designed for busy in-house lawyers looking to improve their commercial and accounting knowledge. Across the private and public sectors, this crucial financial knowledge is often identified as a key area for improvement for in-house lawyers.

At the conclusion of the workshop you will be able to:

- Use and understand financial terminology;
- Read financial statements and understand how they inter-relate;
- Understand how financial reports are prepared and manipulated;
- Complete basic financial analysis and be able to monitor financial performance.

About the trainers

The workshops will be led by Barry Jordan and Lorinda Kelly in Wellington and Jason Weir and Owen Turner in Auckland. Lorinda, Jason, Barry and Owen are experienced forensic accountants and senior members of Deloitte's forensic team. They are regularly called on to provide expert accounting evidence in legal proceedings, conduct fraud investigations and complete complex financial investigations. A critical component of this work is explaining financial and accounting concepts to clients, lawyers and judges.
